Tommy,

How's it going, first i would like to apologies that i didn't get to meet you and second i would like to say sorry it has taken me this long to contact you to let you know that i received your letter. Receiving a letter from someone (victim in this case) is quite the pat on the back, the day you dropped off this letter was a 1st for me. I have been a firefighter for four years, following in my fathers footsteps as well as my grandfathers. The day your crash happened was like no other i have encountered, everything was going great hanging around and shooting the shit at the F.D. (Fire Dept.) then our pagers went off for a motor vehicle crash at your location with entrapment and injuries. My Chief was at home listening to his radio and heard EMS going to your crash and had the instinct to take a ride down the road and see what was going on, upon his arrival he viewed your car and saw how bad it was and called for us, upon my arrival i saw your truck and we went to work cutting the doors off and rolling the floor board..... you know this would be much easier to give you a call or have a beer... I don't know if that's cool with you because as i was emailing you the 1st time the computer deleted all i wrote explaining everything. I basically explained everything that had happened and wanted to thank you for helping me get over a crash that my sister got into that was very similar to yours and your are extremely strong and have quite the fight in you to get over such bad things that happened, damn I'm pissed it deleted everything.. well if you one day feel like taking that offer up give me a call or email me back, I'd appreciate it, And if you ever need a helping hand don't hesitate to call man. Hope to hear from you soon
